(a) what is the estimated contribution of women labour in national development—social, educational, agricultural and other areas of development;

(b) whether it is a fact that due recognition is not given to women labour in policy making, planning, allocation of resources, provision of support, services and information; and

(c) if so, what steps are being taken to give due recognition to women labour?

THE MINISTER OF STATE IN THE MINISTRY OF PLANNING (SHRTMATI VASUNDHARA RAJE) : (a) Out of the total labour force and employed persons in the country in 1999-2000, women constituted 25.84% and 25.73% respectively.

(b) and (c) Equal opportunities are available to women through Equal Remuneration Act, 1976. Maternity benefits to female workers are available through Maternity Benefit Act, 1961. Many other enactments include special provisions to safeguard interests of women workers.
